ASCHAFFENBURG: THE CULTURAL CITY BETWEEN THE SPESSART AND THE RHINE-MAIN AREA

In the midst of the diverse cultural landscape of northern Bavaria and as part of the Frankfurt Rhine-Main metropolitan area, Aschaffenburg sets a striking accent with its museums and cultural highlights.

Shaped through centuries by the archbishops of Mainz and the Bavarian kings, spectacular buildings and outstanding garden landscapes create the exceptional setting. The Renaissance Johannisburg Palace with its internationally significant collections and the unrivalled Pompejanum offer the visitor impressive experiences.

The Aschaffenburg museum landscape introduced here has a special richness: the range extends from nationally respected Modernist art exhibitions to the impressive archaeological collections and highlights of medieval and Renaissance art. In addition to the natural sciences and the history of the city and its industry, the focus is on the internationally famous artists Ernst Ludwig Kirchner and Christian Schad.

Aschaffenburg’s excellent transport connections, the central location of all points of interest, the many possibilities for a stroll through the Old City’s shops, restaurants, and hotels, all entice the visitor to linger and enjoy the many natural and artistic offerings.

The Christian Schad Museum is currently under construction, its opening is planned for fall of 2018.

Christian Schad (1894–1982) is one of the most important protagonists of Modernism: His life is connected with the European cities of Zurich, Geneva, Rome, Vienna, and Berlin and reflects in an exemplary way the art movements of the twentieth century, from Dada, Expressionism, and New Objectivity to Magic Realism after 1945.

In addition to the “icons” of New Objectivity, his international fame was established by his camera-less photography – Schadography. The Christian Schad Museum presents the artist’s persona and his work in the context of social developments.

Until the new museum opens in the fall of 2018, a biographical documentation on the work of Christian Schad and the museum project can be viewed at the Palace Museum.
Special exhibitions on the art of classical Modernism and the present day

Since 1990, the Kunsthalle Jesuitenkirche has been Aschaffenburg's exhibition space for works of classical Modernism and established movements in contemporary art.

In 1612 the Mainz elector Johann Schweikard von Kronberg founded a branch of the Jesuit order in Aschaffenburg and provided funds for the construction of a church, which was completed by 1621.

Today, the deconsecrated sacred space with its stucco decoration offers a striking atmosphere for exhibiting modern art. Generally, three or four temporary exhibitions are mounted annually.

Hours:
Tuesday 2 pm - 8 pm
Wednesday to Sunday
10 am - 5 pm
Closed Monday

Barrier-free access
From the Middle Ages Aschaffenburg was the favorite residence of the Archbishops of Mainz, the most powerful spiritual princes in the Holy Roman Empire.

The magnificent Renaissance building is administered by the Bavarian Palace Department and in addition to the state collections has also housed the City of Aschaffenburg’s Palace Museum since 1972. The museum’s 1,400 square meters of space display artworks and historical objects from six centuries.

Regular special exhibitions of regional artists and themes in the decorative arts complement the collections of princely prestige and representation and the history of the city and its industry in the nineteenth century.
Together with the adjacent Abbey Church and the cloisters dating from around 1200, the Abbey Museum of the City of Aschaffenburg forms a unique ensemble. The atmosphere of these historic buildings brings to life the period of the monastic canons.

Aschaffenburg experienced its first flowering in the Middle Ages and Renaissance. Cardinal Albert of Brandenburg chose the city for his residence.

The major works of the famous Abbey treasury and the Altarpiece of St. Magdalene from the workshop of Lucas Cranach the Elder are highlights in the permanent exhibition.

NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUM

Natural sciences
Regional flora and fauna
Geology
Mineralogy

The former city palace of the Counts of Schönborn from 1681 has housed the natural history collections since 1970, some of which trace back to the collection of the former Royal Bavarian Forestry Academy.

Not only the local flora and fauna are presented, but numerous exotic animals and plants can be discovered here as well. The geology and minerology departments introduce the topography and geological history of the Spessart region.

Numerous educational offerings for children, families, and adults are offered by the Tour Guide Network.

Hours:
Daily 9 am - 12 pm and 1 pm - 4 pm
Closed Wednesdays
Witness to the former Jewish community

The permanent exhibition on the history of the former Jewish community in Aschaffenburg extends from the first mention in 1267 to the persecution under the Nazis.

Historical documents such as photographs and newspaper articles and advertisements illustrate the constantly changing life of the community. It is also clear how profoundly Jewish citizens shaped the city’s economic and cultural life. Numerous cult objects, including a changing exhibition of Torah wimpels and objects from the working world are the last, impressive testaments of the centuries-long history.

The rabbinate house in which the museum is located today once stood in close vicinity to the synagogue, built in 1891–93. A model shows the urban layout and a film with a 3-D reconstruction of the synagogue, destroyed during Kristallnacht in 1938, vividly presents the imposing former building.

Hours:
Wednesday  9 am - 4 pm
Thursday   2 pm - 6 pm
Every first Sunday in the month  2 pm - 4 pm
June - September: every Sunday  2 pm - 4 pm

Admission is free
Guides available anytime by arrangement.
The classical building on Landingstraße has been used since 1997 by the Neuer Kunstverein Aschaffenburg e. V. for exhibition projects with international and regional artists.

Four to five exhibitions are mounted annually. An accompanying program with artist's talks, guided tours, film evenings, readings, and creative activities for children supplements the offerings.

The annual Christmas art market at the beginning of December has become a popular event. In the summer the shady courtyard offers a quiet oasis in the middle of the city.
A successful factory owner, Anton Gentil (1867–1951) was able to amass a large fortune and became a part of Aschaffenburg’s history as a collector, artist, and donor.

Over the course of his life he built several fanciful villas in the city, which he furnished with his spectacular and varied art collection. In 1949 he donated the property on Grünewaldstraße including the precious art treasures to his hometown: in this way, a whimsical “collector's house” has been preserved unchanged to the present day, its originality and special atmosphere interpreting the tradition of the Arts and Crafts movement in its own unique way.
